The idea is that the weight provides gentle, deep pressure that helps calm the child and thus help in the sleep disturbances that are common among those with autism. Studies suggest that 40 to 80 percent of ASD children have significant sleep problems – in particular difficulty falling asleep and staying asleep. These blankets are however very expensive. Cyndi Frisch, the owner of A Thread of Magic, partnering with KultureCity can provide FREE weighted blankets to children on the spectrum. Visit now >>
